FRIDAY MORNING, SEPT. 28, 1860.

The Union and American of yesterday comments upon an editorial of the Patriot, relative to the action of the Breckinridge-Yancey leaders in Northern States, who are pretend ing to a desire to fuse with Douglas and Bell to defeat Lixcoln, and vet demand impossible terms. Our contemporary thinks us ignorant of the facts touching their course in Pennsylvania, and remarks:

Now the Parrior knows, or ought to have known, that after the disruption at Balti more, a JOINT ELECTORAL TICKET was agreed upon by the friends of Breckinridge and Douglas, and the manner in which the vote was to be cast by that ticket was agreed upon af Cresson. Upon that ticket there were twelve or more avowed friends of the Douglas. Forney and a few other semi-Republi can friends of Douglas repudiated the Cres son arrangement.

The Union and American's recollection o things and ours differ. We do not know that a "joint electoral ticket was agreed upon by the friends of BRECKINRIDGE and DOUGLAS,' as stated. Our recollection of the matter agrees with that of Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, who states the facts in his Ashland speech as fol-

Was Mr. Douglas willing to unite in the only practical mode for the defeat of Mr. Lincoln, as many of the wisest men in the East thought? Of the details of that I know nothing Did not the Democratic State Con vention in Pennsylvania, before the National Convention assembled, nominate an electoral ticket and place it before the people, and did not a large mojority of the State Central Committee of Pennsylvania, after a disruption at Bal timore, propose that the people of Pennsylvania should vote for the electoral ticket, without any change, and that those electors should vote for whoever could defeat Mr. Lincoln? Was not that recommended?

Is not this the Cresson arrangement referred to; and were not the "large majority of the State Central Committee" anti-Doug las? How could it be expected that Doug-LAS would consent to take an electoral ticket of the kind proposed, which, as between him and the secession candidate, did not give him as many electors as he was entitled to?

Mr. SLIDELL made a speech recently in New Orleans, in which he said-

With regard to Mr. John Bell, I shall have but one word to say. Toward him, personally, I entertain feelings of esteem and of respect. I have known him for many years, and have had, besides, the pleasure of serving with him for some time upon an important committee in the U.S. Senate. I know him to be amiable, good and kind; I believe him to be patriotic. I have no doubt that he is actuated by pure and worthy intentious, but I have no hesitation in saying that the principles which he professes are not of a charac ter to offer guarantees of conservation to the country. He may guide the bark of State upon a smooth and unruffled sea, but his hand needs the power and nerve to steer clear of peril in times of storm.

Mr. Bell will, no doubt, feel under vast obligations to Mr. SLIDELL for his admissions. "Amiable, good and kind," "patriotic," and "actuated by pure and worthy intentions." The best traits of character for a citizen, and a President. The principles of Mr. Bell are quite as commendable, and, Mr. SLIDELL to the contrary, are "of a character to offer guarantees of conservation to the country." Indeed, they are the only principles involved in the Presidential canvass that do offer "guarantees of conservation to the country." Lincoln and his "irrepressible conflict" promise only a continuation of sectional strife and agitation; BRECKINEIDGE and his slave and agitation; Breckinkings and his slave to the Breckinridge ticket, he utterly ignored code promise the country nothing better; all mention of Wm. L. Yancey! The silent inwhilst Derglas and squatter sovereignty do not afford a safe asylum from the dangers of either republicanism or Breckinridge-Yanceyism. The constitutional union party alone offer to the country guarantees of Peace-of a preservation of our justitutions-and of a restoration of harmony.

"He may guide the bark of State upon a smooth and unruffled sea, but his hand needs the power and nerve to steer clear of peril in times of storm." Mr. SLIDELL is a supporter of Mr. BRECKINRIDGE. Surely he cannot mean to be understood as intimating that his young favorite is a proper pilot for "times of storm"? When and where has Mr. BRECKINRIDGE exhibited the great attributes of mind and heart which are required to steer the ship of State when perils beset her path? There is nothing in his record to show that he | you I've no hankering after this sort of thing. would, in such a crisis, hold firmer nerves or If California goes for Breckinridge, I will be a steadier hand than the presumptuous Phaeton when he essayed to drive the charlot of the sun. THE MASK THROWN OFF .- The Baltimore Patriot, under the guise of supporting BELL and EVERETT, has been doing all it could to steadily, though clowly, gaining on him in the interior. The friends of the latter are growing more confident and boastful, as the promote the success of Lixcoln. When charged with its hypocrisy, it had the hardihood to deny it. Its editor has, however, at hood to deny it. Its editor has, however, at day of election approaches, and are certain last thrown off the mask. The N.Y. He said that lu Baltimore they had tried to injure his paper by taking away advertisements, but he had gone to an auctioneer and said, "There is a large three-story brick house, well built and furnished; put it up and sell it for cash,
